About David Trubridge

David Trubridge's early work came to prominence in 2001 when the Italian design house Cappellini bought the rights for his recliner Body Raft. The Coral light followed in 2003, establishing a blueprint for kitset products that minimised environmental footprint.

Today, David Trubridge Ltd makes everything in our New Zealand factory — which includes a showroom and design studio. We have a team of skilled designers working on a range of projects: both bespoke for an international client base and for our own production.

The company also has a dedicated design facility; DT Studio, which works internationally on commission work, public art and licensed designs for other companies. These projects have taken place all over the world and for varied clients, both large corporations and small businesses.

We can project manage for, or collaborate with, an existing team. We accommodate any scale from jewellery to giant sculptures. We have worked on a varied range of projects including fabric collections, wall coverings, sustainable outdoor screening, acoustic products and natural homewares.

We believe that every day is a footprint in time for which we must be held accountable. We aim to be as sustainable as possible. All aspects of our company and products are continually developed to be better. Our goal is to leave a delicate footprint on this Earth.
